LGBTQ Aging Resources

Updated June 2018

@BostonElderINFO

Introduction

Welcome!

This booklet includes resources that provide programs, services and helpful information to the Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender Queer (LGBTQ) aging community in and around Boston. Inclusion into this resource guide does not imply endorsement of an agency's purpose, method, or quality of service. Consumers and caregivers are encouraged to evaluate and choose appropriate resources.

Programs included in this resource booklet provide information, education, advocacy, training, or referral for health and human services or related services. In order to reach a broader audience, most resources listed in this guide also have staff that speak multiple languages and offer translated materials on their programs and resources. More in depth details, events and activities on the organizations listed can be found on their social media sites (including ours!) such as, Facebook and Twitter.

We welcome and encourage everyone to contact our bilingual Information Specialists for a more comprehensive and personalized discussion on what may best meet the needs of the older LGBTQ adult or caregiver.

USE IT, SHARE IT

It is our goal that members of the community use this resource guide and share it with others so that all may benefit from its contents.

The booklet is available for download at www.elderinfo.org/resources/LGBTQ

Go Out for Dinner

To combat isolation, LGBT older adults are invited to supper

When Dale Mitchell, the executive director of Ethos, a nonprofit serving older adults in the Jamaica Plain neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts, was thinking about how he could provide the gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender community with a supportive and safe way to socialize, he hearkened back to the smoky, boozy bygone tradition of supper clubs.

Popular in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, supper clubs brought groups together in a private setting for themed evenings of food, wine and entertainment. In 2012, Mitchell revived the dining experience — minus the smoking and drinking — with Out4Supper, the Boston area's first LGBT-friendly supper club.

The experiment, which began with a handful of participants, now attracts up to 50 LGBT older people and their friends each month. A primary reason for Ethos's launching of the program was to combat social isolation, a particular and potentially lethal danger among LGBT elders.

"These seniors are less likely to be partnered, and too often are estranged from their own families," says Mitchell, a longtime advocate for the community. With events like Out4Supper, LGBT elders can "commune with each other in a safe and inviting environment."

The dinners take place in a spacious, private dining area provided by the Mount Pleasant Home, a nonprofit residential care center for people age 62 and over. The gourmet menu, prepared by the home's chefs, has included such entrées as swordfish with pineapple relish and seafood linguine with lobster sauce.

Entertainment has come courtesy of acclaimed pianists and a capella singers from Boston University. There are also speakers on such topics as depression management and long-term care.

The diversity of the diners is a big part of the fun. Whereas some Ethos gatherings previously drew only gay men, or only lesbians, Out4Supper is marketed to appeal to all.

"We found that there had been some self-segregation at earlier events," says Ethos community relations director Ray Santos. "We tailored marketing of Out4Supper to ensure participation among men and women and we also schedule it in the evening to include seniors who are still working."

The result, says Santos, is more than a nice meal: "Out4Supper has many regulars, different ages, and it's really nice to see that people have made lasting connections." ■
